laws. You should consult your own legal, tax investment or other advisors, at both the onset of any transaction and on an ongoing basis to determine the laws and analyses applicable to your specific circumstances.

Use of Historic, Model or Hypothetical Performance Data Risk Disclosure

Unless stated otherwise, any performance data represents past, model or hypothetical performance. Past performance is not indicative of future returns and should not be relied on. No representation or warranty is made that any returns indicated will be achieved. Certain assumptions may have been made in the analysis which have resulted in any returns detailed herein. Transaction costs may or may not have been included in the calculation of returns. Changes to the assumptions may have a material impact on any returns. You should be aware that certain legal, accounting and tax restrictions, margin requirements, commissions and other transaction costs and changes to the assumptions used may significantly affect the economic consequences of the transactions discussed.

Futures and Options Risk Disclosure

The trading of futures or options on futures contains inherent risks. We remind you that these investments are subject to market risk and will fluctuate in value. The investments discussed or recommended by us may be unsuitable for clients depending upon their specific investment objectives and financial position. Before engaging in the purchasing or writing of options, you should understand the nature and extent of your rights and obligations and be aware of the risks involved, including the risks pertaining to the business and financial condition of the issuer and the underlying stock. A secondary market may not exist for these securities.

Clients engaging in spreading should understand that spreading may entail substantial commissions, because it involves at least twice the number of contracts as a long or short position and because spreads are almost invariably closed out prior to expiration. Clients should be advised that the tax treatment applicable to spread transactions should be carefully reviewed prior to entering into any transaction. Also, while a client who engages in spread transactions may be reducing risk, the client is also reducing profit potential. The risk/reward ratio should be considered. The risk of exercise in a spread position is the same as that in a short position. Certain clients may be able to anticipate exercise and execute a "rollover" transaction. However, should exercise occur, it would clearly mark the end of the spread position and thereby change the risk/reward ratio. Due to early assignments of the short side of the spread, what appears to be a limited risk spread may have more risk than initially perceived. A client with a spread position in index options that is assigned an exercise is at risk for any adverse movement in the current level between the time the settlement value is determined on the date when the exercise notice is filed with OCC and the time when such client sells or exercises the long leg of the spread. Other multiple-option strategies involving cash settled options, including combinations and straddles, present similar risk.

ETFs Risk Disclosures

ETFs are subject to market risk and will fluctuate in value. Clients may obtain prospectuses for the funds from the ETF distributor. The prospectuses contain more complete and important information about the ETFs and should be read carefully before investing.
